GOOD WORK ON PENAL CODE

Revision Nearly Completed by Committee

APPOINTED BY CONGRESS

The Next Session of the National Legislature May Pass This Most Desirable Legislation.

Washington, Nov. 23.-The Joint ommittee of the House and Senate on the Revision of the Laws which has been in session here has made such good progress that the members expect to complete their work on the penal code and have it adopted at the approaching session of Congress. It is believed that night sessions of Congress will be necessary for consideration of the report of the Joint Committee, but the members are determined to bring at least part of their work to a conclusion, and an earnest effort will be made in the Senate and House to get the desirable legislation through. Representative Moon of Pennsylvania, chairman of the House Committee on Revision of Laws, whose report, submitted at the last session, is being considered by the Joint Committee as the basis for framing a report said:

"We are confident that Congress will deal with this matter at the approaching session. Work on the revision of the laws has been in progress since June 4, 1897, when a commission was created by Congress to undertake the task of sodification with a view to com piling the statutes in more simple form than is now the case. It has been a tremendous undertaking, and it will not be possible to conclude the revision for several years. We have practically completed work on the penal code, and are ready to submit it to Congress, and we believe that there should be promp action in the consideration of this sub ject, in view of its importance: Our plan is to present the penal code for adoption in bills to be introduced by members of the committee, including the various sections, of which there are four hundred. After the penal code we shall take up the judiciary, and next the statutes relating to the organiza-

sions. The other members are Senator Fulton, Clapp, Sutherland, Overman and Martin and Representatives Moon,
